

Tyng-Ruey Chuang is an associate research fellow at Academia Sinica, jointly appointed at the Institute of Information Science (IIS) and the Research Center of Information Technology Innovation (CITI). He also teaches at the National Taiwan University as an associate professor. His research areas include Programming languages, Web technologies, Geo-spatial informatics, and Internet and society. He is the project lead of Creative Commons Taiwan. Creative Commons Taiwan is a project hosted at CITI, and has been supported by Academia Sinica since it started at IIS in 2003. More information about Tyng-Ruey Chuang can be found at his website: <http://www.iis.sinica.edu.tw/~trc/>